DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

At Kingston Landing on the Choptank River stands a single house from the time the landing was an important shipping point for this area of Talbot County. The building is a three part dwelling built of frame and covered with aluminum siding. The house telescopes from west to east. The large west part is three bays long with entrance on the easternmost bay and two windows west on both facades. There are three windows on the second story north facade and two 6/6 sash dormers. Unlike the north, the south facade possesses a two story porch which is accessible from the above mentioned door on the first story and a door above. Like the back, there are two dormers on this side of the 'A' roof. A brick chimney rises within the west gable.

The middle section is three bays long and slightly narrower than the tallest part. It is two full storys tall. The central door on the north side is assymetrical. There are no doors on the south. Two windows are located on the second story of both facades. A brick chimney rises on the outside gable of this section.

The smallest wing is two or three bays long and one story tall. An entrance vestibule has been built onto the north facade and a leanto wing on the south.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Kingston Landing is important architecturally because of its telescopic form as well as the fact that it is one of only a few buildings of the early 19th century to have a two story porch in Talbot County. In concept it is similar to the Stitley house and Woodland Farm, both in Dorchester County, with its porch and long wing.

The building is a reminder of the days when Kingston Landing was a village and port. Kingston was established by an Act of the General Assembly in 1683. The name Kingston was not assigned to the town until 1706 when it was known to have been in existence and operating as the shipping point for the area north of Kings Creek. In 1763, the General Assembly established a public tobacco warehouse, but it was discontinued in 1796. As a port it continued in operation at least until 1918. The 19th century, with the growth of river transportation around the bay, probably saw more activity than the 18th century and before.
